

MORE MACKEREL SEEN.

Several Schools Sighted South of Cape Hatteras.

Report Brought Here By Well Known Fisherman.

More mackerel have been seen in southern waters.

Mr. William Munroe, a well-known mackerel fisherman, who has been south snapper fishing during the winter, has arrived home and brings the report of fish.

He was a passenger on the steamer San Marcos of the Mallory line, bound to New York and reports that on last Saturday, on the steamer's course, and 65 miles before she got to Diamond Shoal lightship, he sighted several schools of mackerel.

One school was passed close by the steamer and the fish could be plainly seen chasing the feed in the water. There were lots of sea geese and gannets in the vicinity, but north of Hatteras no birds were seen.

It is time now to be hearing of mackerel and Mr. Munroe's report is taken as reliable and credited by all. The locality where the fish were seen is to the southward of Cape Hatteras.

FURTHER PARTICULARS.

Of the Going Ashore of the Sch. Alice M. Parsons.

Sch. Alice M. Parsons, Capt. Joseph Cusick, arrived this morning from a halibut trip, and the captain brings further particulars relative to the vessel going ashore two weeks ago.

The vessel was at Port au Basque, N. F., at the time, and during a heavy storm, the vessel was blown ashore, the captain and crew being successful in getting her off unaided. She was leaking quite badly but the crew clung to the vessel, and by working the pumps, brought the craft safely to this port.

How badly the craft is damaged is not as yet known, but an examination of the vessel's bottom will probably be made today.

The schooner had about 10,000 pounds of halibut when she went ashore.
